It's taken me almost 6 years to be okay with this. 6 years for the lump in my throat to get smaller. You became a huge part of my life. You loved me just like my mother did. You started dating my mom and quickly got past my stone wall I had built up. You broke it down and took the time to get to know me. You helped me over come so many things in the time I knew you. We had our differences but you always remained loving me and my stubborn ways. You didn't have to step up the way you do, but you did because you cared. You stepped up and helped me in any way you could. My dad worked all the time so you stepped up and did all the things he couldn't. You helped me pick the right bat out and always brought Powerade to my games for me. You never missed a single game you were always there and made sure to cheer me on. I never got to truly thank you. It breaks my heart. We had a lot of long talks outside or in the kitchen while mom was in the shower or at the store. You always knew when I was down and always made it a point to pick me up. I'll never forget all the nights we sat outside in the back porch with mom and sang and counted stars after dinner. All the quick Dairy Queen runs for ice cream before mom came home to cook dinner. Kevin you were a good man. I wish you would have realized how much you were loved and let us help you. I wish you were still here. Paislee would have loved to throw a ball around at Grammie's house with you.

You restored some of my hope that there are still some single good guys out there to be found. You quickly became a loved member of our family. When we learned about the struggles you faced we all wanted to encourage and support you until the day you conquered your demons and we could rejoice with you. Sadly you didn't win the fight and you will remain in our hearts if not in our presence. It is hard to comprehend you are gone. We know that you loved Rita and us. And she loved you so very much. It will be hard to watch her going on without you. I know your family's heart was broken too. May God give us all comfort as we deal with your loss.

You were always asking if I needed help every time I was running around like a crazy lady trying to do it all. I always loved talking to you at family gathering and when you came for a haircut. You always told me I was strong like my aunt Rita. I will miss you.

I loved you from the beginning and I will love you through the end of time. I only wish that you could've seen all of the wonderful things about you that I saw. My sadness is beyond measure right now. I may never understand why you left so soon. There will always be a place for you in my heart. I love you...more!
