im running on raw emotions. i want the world to know about my sis. independent, did things her way whether anyone thought she was right or wrong. she was multi talented. she could tear down a wall hang drywall, nstall a new floor paint read a book , tan and slap a meal on the table at supper. nnot only that she crotched, knitted, sewed, quilted, was great at crosswords, jigsaw puzzles and anything else she set her mind at. i pray my sis is in Gods hands beside our mom and grandmoms and the Blessed Mother. i love her dearly and will miss laughing at the same silly things and eating wierd types of food that maybe other people would think us strange for. i wish i was more like her in somethings. i will pray and mourn a long time for her. the best thing my sister ever did was have 2 beautiful children whom i also love and pray they will carry on and take away the best parts of there mom. Godbless you chrissy, i will treasure my memories of you, hugt gran and mom for me. till we meet again. love always Cindy xxxooo
